The former residence of Yin Youmo, one of Jiading's early entrepreneurs, is located in the old town of Loutang.

Built in the late Qing Dynasty (1644-1911), the antique-red mansion is temporarily closed to the public. However, those who want to experience the charm of ancient architecture can visit his younger brother's nearby residence instead, which shares similar architectural styles.

The home study, a former residence built during the early Republic of China (1912-1949) period, underwent a renovation last year that retained a majority of the structure's original architectural features.

These include the entrance hall, the door of etiquette between the front yard and main hall, as well as
