

The layers of red maple trees at the Quejiao Pavilion in Guyi Garden are like a fiery red sunset, complementing the landscape of the garden, the pavilions and the towers.

As the weather cools, more than 20 types of trees in Guyi Garden in Jiading, including ginkgo, maple, hackberry and Chinese tulip trees, change their foliage color. With the many different leaves dazzling in the sunshine, the garden has become a perfect getaway for nature lovers.

Fall foliage transforms Guyi Garden into a magical place

The yellow leaves of the surrounding ginkgo grove form a natural carpet. To enhance the visual experience, the garden has several “no-sweeping” areas.

Photographers eager to capture the autumn scene. — Photos by Xi Lingyan